@/Arpro Erp® “Outsourced-Work Third-Party Account”

Florida Region

@/Arpro® designed for platforms:

Nowadays the relationship between third-party suppliers of processing and management such as contractors of operations on behalf of customers, plays particular importance in our market.

Both needs are managed by @/Arpro® solutions through special tools designed in the applications; we analyze in detail and individually, these two requirements.

Arpro – Udine

a) Tertiary - Processing and Service Suppliers

The management considers the third-party as an integral part of its set of productive resources, thus leaving the maximum freedom in the organization of work cycles: in a single cycle you can find stages of internal or external processing, even for multiple contractors simultaneously.

@/Arpro® and @/Arpro Erp® recognize the “outside contractor” and the need to prepare the necessary documents:

- ✓ orders to suppliers of raw materials (calculated with the planning tool)
- ✓ orders to suppliers for the machining or assembly operations to be run
- ✓ documents for “in-process” account, to send the material to be transformed (if applicable), to the machining or assembly suppliers
- ✓ loading documents for the transformed products (semi-finished or finished)

Easily determine each processing phase by the way you fill in the transport document, choosing from the list of materials sent of the semi-finished product.

The material sent-out for the “in-process” account is loaded into a separate warehouse created for the “outside supplier” (additional warehouse, created just once), allowing for simple and optimized inventory control.

The final balance of the external working phases processes the same way as in the headquarters, even partially-worked products from original customer orders.

Depending on the BOMs structure or Job Order reference ordered from the customer, supplier orders are auto-generated for raw materials or machining and/or assembly operations needed.

Supplier orders relating to machining and/or assembly operations are automatically turned into work orders (production loads or launches). Processes are started for work orders whose materials are available, either partially or completely, controlling production flow & worked time.

All Quality control systems are activated from this point on.

Example of a third-party production chain:

1. order of raw materials to Supplier 1, with delivery to the warehouse of Supplier 2
(in the supplier order created, the Supplier 2 warehouse simply needs to be selected)
2. order of needed production processes to Supplier 2, informing what is necessary
(as in the drawings of the BOMs or Job Orders requested by the customer order)
3. once the initial ordered raw material arrives at Supplier 2's warehouse, Supplier 1's order only needs to be executed to keep your inventory updated
4. upon receipt of the processed products, "Loads" are moved into the main warehouse and unloaded simultaneously from the Supplier 2's warehouse.

If local manufacturing is necessary (i.e. assembling the various parts of the product delivered back to the main warehouse), before executing the customer order, the procedure described above needs to be completed.

b) Tertiary on Behalf of Customers

Customer orders management for partial or total processing.

Eliminating manual or redundant processes helps eliminate excess costs and increases the accuracy of your order management process

A Graphical Interface designed to facilitate users that manage many orders to customers, with different deliveries even for the same order, where it is often necessary to have an overview rather than having to open document per document individually.

The window displays warehouse items of orders still pending, even if partially executed.
